THE PARSON'S HOLIDAY.
During the last days of August all Oldtown has been in a condition of feverish excitement to know whether Parson Lawrence would come home at the time appointed. "His holiday was only for the month of August," Deacon Suttler said at the village store, "but Heaven knows but he'll stretch it another week, leaving us to pay the supply on Sunday. The old man's not a bee in his bonnet, an' 'ther's no knowin' where it'll lead him."

Smith, the grocer, nodded emphatically as he tied up a pound of sugar for the widow Potts. "It was your doing, Deacon. City ways, city ways! Our pastor must be off like the others to rest after his hard work. We'll have stained glass and choir boys next. Rest, indeed! Writing two bits of sermons a week!
If he'd stood behind the counter shoveling out office and sugar the year round! The widow Potts said nothing but she thought of her year of drudgery over the sewing machine and the parson's work seemed very light to her, indeed.
She 'could have stood up and talked for an hour, twice a week if she had the college education," she said at home. "Talkin' of the laws of the Jews and the old Romans and prophecies. There's mighty small amount of food for my soul in such talk, anyhow." There are many more of the congregation who, when they saw the parson's grey head among the passengers in the old red coach, remembered it was Saturday night and wondered when he meant to write his next day's sermon. He always took half the week to write one.

When the parson went away in the red coach his heart was heavy with him. The other passengers kept aloof from the gloomy old man with his meek eyes and sharp, tired voice. He had not been out of the Oldtown circuit for ten years. It was the new member, Porter, who had given him the money for this holiday. "Go find some grist for the mill," he said, "otherwise it will grind nothing but dust." Grist?
It occurred to the old man for the first time in his life that something more was needed for his work than earnest endeavor and prayers. His salary was too small for him to buy books or current literature. His reading was confined to a small theological library which he had owned for years, and a weekly religious newspaper. Year in and year out he talked with the half dozen brethren and sisters of his own church, and the dozen families outside. He knew every crack and cranny of their characters, as they did his; they were exaggerated in each other's eyes as bugs in a microscope.
They shaped and measured all the great Christian graces by their own inch rule. Charity was represented by the annual fair in the lecture room for the cause of missions, and faith by the vigor with which they sent all the world rounders of their own sect to perdition. Vague rumors reached them of great movements in this religious body and that, but Sister Potts and Brother Suttler only shook their heads and talked of the unregenerate. The Evil Spirit was typified to the village by drunken old Drum, who was a very unhelpful case it is true, but still human.

There was a good deal of discussion as to where the parson should go for his holiday.
Many of the brethren wished that he should improve it by making a collecting tour, begging money for a new steeple; others recommended some of the large religious gatherings at the seashore or mountains. But the parson, once awakened by the word "grist," took the matter into his own hand. "I am going a 'fishing,'" he said. "I need to go fishing when I was a boy, and it'll do me good to be a boy again." So he went fishing, tramped over the mountains, stood to the waist in water, forgot his trout as he looked up to the great heights and listened to the thunder among them.

The petty gossip and carking, moldy cares of the village slipped away from his mind and left it fresh and free. It seemed to him that he could hear now in the thunder in the solemn night, in the movement of the little wind flower in the grass, the words of his omnipotent gracious Master, "Be not afraid; it is I." He never had heard them in the moldy books or weekly newspaper. He tied up his rod and line and went to a little seashore watering place.
There were not more people there than in his own church, but they were of many differing kinds. There were Jews, Roman Catholics, Unitarians, Friends. He threw himself into all their fun and work, and as far as he could into their thoughts. It was a genial, joyous time. He discovered some good, gracious man, some clever fellow, every day. He woke every morning with fresh astonishment that there were so many good people in the world.

Some of them, whose names were akin to Atheism in his creed, were devout, God-fearing men and women, with their ideas of Him and their brother man based on broader, more liberal ground than he had ever known.

There was a terrible accident during his stay; a man drowned, his wife and children left helpless; and in the sudden surge of feeling which laid bare every heart about him in the tenderness, the humanity, the Christ-like pity and help which came to the widow and orphans, he began to understand the meaning of the word brother as his Master used it, not as it was bandied about in Oldtown.

The parson was glad, however, to be at home again. He springs down from the old red stage with his eyes sparkling and his face so full of laughter and happiness that Oldtown is startled —even shocked. Oldtown is of a funeral turn of mind. He does not think of preparing a sermon. He has so much to say—his heart so burns within him, that the Sabbath day seems all too short. There is not a word of theology or the old Jews in it either. It is the home-liest sort of talk. But when they come out of church everybody stops to shake hands and exchange a hearty greeting. It is as if they had been somewhere with the fresh wind blowing, and the sun shining, and God himself near at hand.—N. Y. Tribune.

MATIN AGUE MIXTURE

Will Positively Cure
CHILLS AND FEVER!
This Mixture contains nothing whatever that can injure the general health, nor is it disagreeable to the taste. It is composed of the finest ingredients, and the patient need not change his customary mode of living whilst taking the remedy. It is a pleasant tonic, and it taken in small quantities before breakfast each day will prevent chills and fever in localities where miasma prevails. It will be found that Matin Ague Mixture excites an appetite and improves the general health. For children as well as adults, it will be found a most effective and pleasant remedy. Price $1.50 per bottle.

XANTHINE
RESTORES
GRAY HAIR
Prepared by XANTHINE CO., Proprietors, Richmond, Va. Price $1 per bottle.
Send for Circulars.

[From Rev. E. T. Baird, Secretary of Publication of Presbyterian Church South.]
RICHMOND, July 27, 1874.
The Xanthine is the only hair dressing I have ever used which has removed the dandruff from the scalp and made my hair soft and pliable.
It has also restored my hair to its natural color; and by occasionally using it as a hair dressing, I have no doubt it will preserve the color.
E. T. BAIRD.

[From Rev. Charles H. Head, D. D., Pastor
Grace street Presbyterian Church.]
RICHMOND, July 20, 1874.
At the suggestion and presentation of a friend, I have used one bottle of Prof. Herz's Hair Restorative, "Xanthine." It has accomplished in a very brief time and without any perceptible unpleasant or injurious effects, what is claimed for it as a restorer of the natural color of hair turning gray.
CHAS. H. HEAD.

[From J. W. Lockwood, Cashier, National Bank of Virginia.]
RICHMOND, VA., June 25, 1874.
Dear Sir—I used on my hair about one third of a bottle of the Xanthine, and the result has been its restoration to its original color.
J. W. LOCKWOOD.

To the Proprietor of the "Xanthine": I have occasionally used your compound, known as "Xanthine," with results perfectly satisfactory as to cleaning the scalp, strengthening the hair and restoring its color.
Respectfully yours, WM. B. ISAACS, President Bank of Commerce.
